Did you know the Forest of Dean is applying to become a UNESCO Biosphere?

What is a UNESCO Biosphere?

An internationally recognised place where people and nature thrive together.

Why are we applying?

We love our forest and every corner of the district, and we want to celebrate its uniqueness, preserve it for future generations, and create new opportunities for communities, businesses, and residents, all while protecting our natural environment.

How could it benefit the Forest of Dean?

Becoming a UNESCO Biosphere can create a wide range of opportunities and benefits for local residents including:

- growing and enhancing strong, thriving local communities
- future-proofing the local economy by attracting new streams of funding and investment through sustainable and green business
- helping to protect our heritage, culture, and unique identity
- supporting sustainable education, skills, and creating new opportunities for all ages
- protecting nature and our local wildlife, both now and in the future
- making us more resilient in response to climate change
- creating a lasting legacy that is internationally recognised.

UNESCO Biosphere status will:

- create more opportunities for local residents
- not create new laws, rules and regulations
- not add additional planning restrictions, enforcements and red tape
- not block development
- protect the ancient traditions and rights of Freeminers, Verderers, and Commoners.

How will it work?

Biospheres are run through partnerships made up of local people, businesses, councils, and national organisations such as Forestry England, Natural England, and the Environment Agency.
